TABLES of the STRENGTH and DEFLECTION of TIMBER. By WILLIAM LEA, Surveyor, Birmingham.

These tables are constructed for the purpose of determining by inspection, or by simple multiplication and division, the dimensions of any description of timber requisite to carry a given weight, or to have, when loaded, a given deflection. They are designed for the use of architects, builders, and carpenters; engineers, shipbuilders' surveyors; and others, who may be in any way interested in converting timber into scantlings for building purposes generally, or for otherwise sustaining transversely any given pressure.

London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and CO., Stationers' Hall-court; E. CUBBORN, Birmingham.

TO CIVIL ENGINEERS AND SURVEYORS.

MR. EDWARD RYDE will send, carriage free, to any address on the receipt of 10s. 6d., the CIVIL ENGINEERS' and SURVEYORS' COMPANION and ASSISTANT, containing comprehensive tables, with practical explanations and copious illustrations, whereby the tedious and irksome the existing system) somewhat complicated and difficult process of setting out slopes and curves, cuttings and embankments is so simplified, as to reduce to its minimum the labour of attendant thereon; it will fully obviate the necessity of calculation; and to bring its comprehension within the capacity of the meanest capacity. The work is well printed and durably bound. Country booksellers may be supplied through the order of Mr. W. EVERETT, Bookseller, 1, Bond-street, Cheltenham.

Mr. RYDE will also send free, on the receipt of fourteen penny stamps, a COMPLETE READY RECKONER, with very plain instructions for measuring and valuing any rubbish. 18, Upper Belgrave-place, Eaton-square.
